10. Social Desirability Response Bias

This section describes three types of positive, negative, and neutral social desirability bias, as well as the effects for researchers. Three types of evidence are presented below:

- 1. The most direct evidence against social desirability response bias is that it does not consistently increase responses to social desirability items. In a series of studies, researchers asked participants to evaluate their own behavior on a number of dimensions. In each study, some participants were asked to evaluate themselves on a set of social desirability items, while others evaluated themselves on a set of neutral items. In every study, the social desirability group did not provide greater scores than the neutral item group. Thus, the evidence strongly supports the nonexistence of social desirability response bias.
- 2. Two additional pieces of evidence for neutral social desirability response bias come from a series of experiments by a research group at Michigan State University. Researchers at MSU conducted a series of 10 studies that examined the effect of social desirability response bias on the self-esteem of college students. In these studies, participants were asked to evaluate themselves on a number of dimensions, including social desirability. In all 10 studies, the social desirability group did not differ significantly from the neutral item group in terms of self-esteem.
- 3. A study of memory recall suggests people respond differently to questions requiring a lie or truth. Recall that social desirability response bias is often used to explain why people tend to provide more positive answers to questions on surveys of personal behavior. One way to examine this question is to ask people to recall events that occurred after they took a lie detector test.

Event Type	Truth	Lie	Truth	Lie	Truth	Lie
From dream	1	1	1	1	1	1
From imagination	1	1	1	1	1	1
From memory	1	1	1	1	1	1
From imagination	1	1	1	1	1	1

In this study, 100 college students (50% of whom were female) viewed either a short film or a lie detector test. They were then asked to remember one event from their dreams, one event from their imagination, and one event from their memory. The results showed that there was no difference among any of the groups.

Because the area of the complex shape is equal to the sum of the areas of the divided nonoverlapping regions! Area Formulas Together we will learn how to use formulas to find the area of the following basic polygons: Rectangle Area = lw , where l = length and w = width Area of a Rectangle Square Area = x^2 , where x is the length of one side of the square Area of a Square Triangle Area = $1/2*b*h$, where b = base and h = height Area of a Triangle Equilateral Triangle Area = $SQRT(3)/4*x^2$, where x = length of side Area of Equilateral Triangle Parallelogram Area = bh ; where b = length of the base, and h = length of the altitude of the parallelogram Area of a Parallelogram Formula Rhombus Area = $(1/2)d_1*d_2$, where d_1 = length of first diagonal, and d_2 = length of second diagonal Rhombus Area Formula Trapezoid Area = $(1/2)h(b_1 + b_2)$, where h = height, b_1 = length of base one, and b_2 = length of base two Trapezoid Area Formula And then, we will use these formulas for finding the area of basic polygons, to find the area of composite figures. In today's geometry lesson, you're going to learn all about the area of composite figures. Notice that the given polygon is comprised of both a square and a triangle. So let's jump on in! Did you know that any polygonal region can be divided into nonoverlapping regions? Including the tricky ones... ...and lastly, you find out how to use ratios and proportions to find area or lengths of geometric figures too.
